

Abstract of the Disclosure

A process for producing a hollow profiled section using a forming process by fluidic high pressure, in which a metal sheet is deliberately provided with structure elements on its surface. The structure elements increase the maximum degree of shaping of the component during the subsequent high-pressure forming.